Irresistible Learning Topic - Made in the Midlands

End of topic reflection: Do you think it is important to preserve canals in our local area or are they a thing of the past?

Although canals are no longer necessary to transport heavy, bulky goods across Britain, many people think they still have an important role in the community. After the Industrial Revolution, many canals fell into disrepair and have since been restored by the Canal and River Trust and its volunteers, keen to preserve the heritage of the local area.

Look at these pictures of the centre of Birmingham. What has changed over the years?

Task: Research how canals are used by people today e.g. leisure activities, holidays etc.

- Design an informative leaflet to promote the activities that can be enjoyed on the canal. Include a range of activities and to suit all interests. Share your work on our Y6 History display board.
