Dogs and cats are two of the most popular pets in the UK. They have been living with us in our homes for thousands of years. Some people argue that cats are a much better pet than a dog because... that really the case?

One reason why a cat makes a better pet than a dog is that cats can be allowed to roam your house. A dog needs to be kept on a lead and taken for a walk whereas a cat can be let out in the evening to wander the local gardens. One reason when questioned, could that be said but has been proved but makes many of the other end of the village.

Another reason a cat is a better pet than a dog is that they are far cheaper to buy. A cat is much smaller and therefore costs much less than a dog. Furthermore, other than such as limited pet health and looks are all cheaper than similar dogs per day. Several educational websites will tell that the average cat owner spends up to half as much as a typical dog owner.

However, it's not all one sided. There are also some very good reasons why dogs make a better pet than a cat. One reason is that dogs are much easier to train than a cat. Dogs can be trained to sit, stay, fetch, bring you the paper, guide you to the door, and many other things per dog or even something as simple as the paper. They get a lot of the attention you get.

Another reason why dogs make a better pet is that they are far more social than cats. Dogs need to play with other animals. It's much easier to get a dog to play with you and become close by holding across the park. In a recent survey some owners said that if you're per the dog they would probably never go out at all!

As you have read, there are many reasons why cats make good pets but also many reasons why dogs do. It's personally your choice when buying your pet and will depend on the dog you choose. The walking price and might be longer of the cat. You have to decide which pet is best for you.
