

To Parents and Children at Gig Mill,

It has been great over the past three weeks to see school routines return and to see the children excited about learning. Our continued focus on well-being and outdoor learning with the children has been really successful.

Each week children across the school have focussed on a key text and a school value. At the end of our creativity focus, it is wonderful to share some brilliant work from across school and to give out our first creativity awards today. The book we have shared this week was Rain before Rainbows by Smriti Halls and David Litchfield.

So much has changed for children, families and staff over the past year but it is really super to see school once again full of life as we start Spring 2021
